VERDICT

Clean. Not gaming you. A profitable client with a self-destructive habit.

The trades

- 108 trades, all gold, over 5 days
- 87 winning trades, 21 losing trades (80% win rate)
- The 87 wins made +7,527
- The 21 losses cost -5,186
- He keeps only +2,341

In plain terms: 21 losses ate two-thirds of what 87 wins earned. It takes him about 3 winning trades to cover 1 losing trade.

The dangerous habit

He does the opposite of what a disciplined trader should do:

Situation	What he does	What he should do
Winning trades	Closes them fast (about 8 minutes)	Let them run
Losing trades	Holds them until the stop-loss hits (about 18 minutes)	Cut them fast

He grabs small wins quickly and lets losers bleed. This is why his average loss (-247) is almost 3 times his average win (+86).

Risk and reward

- He risks about 2 to make 1 (reward-to-risk roughly 0.4 to 1)
- This only stays profitable while his win rate is above 74%
- He is at 80%, a thin 6-point cushion
- One bad week and the math flips against him

Risk checks

Check	Result
Latency arbitrage	Clear
Scalping	Clear (holds positions too long to be a real scalper)
Swap arbitrage	Clear
Bonus abuse	Clear
Only points to watch	Trades gold 100% of the time; activity rising fast (3 to 52 trades per day)

Bottom line for the broker

He is not a threat and not abusing anything. He is a skilled-looking trader with an upside-down risk habit. The math says a client who cuts winners short and rides losers gives the profit back over time. No action needed now. Worth tagging as a "fragile profitable client" and watching whether the +2,341 survives the next trending week.
